HAPPY TAIL OF THE MIRACLE KITTEN

by Romaine Trudo

On November 5, 2025, Kathy Coffman had no idea that a tiny miracle was about to enter her life. While her car was parked at the Desertview Complex, a fragile six-week-old kitten crawled up into the chassis, seeking warmth and safety. Later that day, as Kathy pulled into her garage, she was startled by the faint cries of a kitten.

Searching carefully, she discovered the little one had slipped out of the car and hidden behind the furnace. Despite her neighbor's help, the frightened kitten remained out of reach. That's when SaddleBrooke Pet Rescue was called and arrived with a small Havahart trap lined with food and a soft blanket. Hours later, when the house was quiet, hunger overcame fear, and the kitten ventured inside.

She was impossibly small—just 1.64 pounds—and trembling with uncertainty. Kathy and her husband, Larry Tolman, welcomed her into their home, keeping her warm and comforted through the night. The next morning, a vet confirmed her age: only six weeks old, yet already a survivor.

From that moment, the kitten – now lovingly named Kacee—began to weave herself into Kathy and Larry's hearts. On December 11, 2025, she was officially adopted, transforming from a frightened stray into a cherished family member.

What better way to celebrate the holiday season than by saving a precious life?

What better way to celebrate the holiday season than by saving a precious life. Kacee's story is a reminder that sometimes, miracles arrive on four tiny paws.

Frostbite Alert: Keep Those Paws and Noses Cozy!

By Diane Korn

Baby, it's cold outside! As winter rolls in, our furry friends feel the chill just like we do—and sometimes even sooner. Once temperatures dip below 45°F, it's time to pull out the pet jackets and booties before any outdoor adventures. When it hits freezing (32°F) or colder, frostbite becomes a real concern. This can happen when skin and tissues freeze after too much time in the cold—especially in pets with short coats, thin fur, or health issues. But truthfully, all pets can be at risk if left out too long.

The spots most likely to get frostbite are your pet's ears, tail, paw pads, and nose. Early signs include pale or grayish skin, shivering, sluggishness, or lifting their paws off the ground. If the skin starts to darken or turn black, that's a sign of more serious damage—and it's time to call the vet right away. Prevention is the best protection! Keep outdoor walks short when it's icy, wet, or windy. Make sure your pet has a warm, dry spot to rest, and consider adding a pet-safe heating pad or cozy blanket. Dressing them up in a sweater, jacket, or booties doesn't just look adorable—it keeps them comfortable too!

If you think your pet might have frostbite, wrap them gently in a warm towel or blanket and get them to the vet as soon as possible. Treatment usually involves gently rewarming the area, pain relief, and protecting against infection.

With just a few precautions, you can help your pets stay safe, warm, and full of winter cheer—because while frosty noses are cute, frostbite definitely isn't!

HAPPY TAIL

Casey, An Ambassador for the Breed

by Romaine Trudo

This is an all-too-familiar story. A two-year-old female Pit Bull/Boxer mix was found running loose in SaddleBrooke late at night on October 2, 2025. A young couple visiting their grandparents spotted her, stopped, and called SaddleBrooke Pet Rescue for help.

When we arrived to scan for a microchip, we discovered a gentle, calm girl with no collar, no tags, and no chip. It was clear she had already given birth to at least one litter in her short life. We named her Casey and immediately posted found notices on Nextdoor and Pawboost. Sadly, no one came forward for this cuddly 52-pound pup.

Casey was placed in foster care with Janet and Dennis Williams, where she stayed for six weeks. During that time, she learned what tender, loving care truly meant. She was showered with attention, toys, daily walks, and the taste of the good life. While in foster care, Casey received all her vaccinations, was spayed, and microchipped—ready at last for her forever home.

An article featuring Casey appeared in the SaddleBag Notes and SaddleBrooke Progress. A couple living in the Ranch saw her photo and asked to meet her. When Casey was introduced to Michelle and Bernie Kembitzky, it was love at first sight. Casey (now Millie) was adopted on November 21, 2025.

Today, Casey is living her best life as the cherished only pet in her new home—spoiled, adored, and exactly where she belongs. This precious little girl has found the happy ending she deserves.

MOZART (JOSHUA)

by Rochelle Puczkowskyj - Owner, Ro Rescue

It was one day after new years
2024
Headed for the shelter
With nothing much in store.

I walked into the clinic
It was a busy day
A trapper cage was balanced
On a shiny silver tray

I looked inside to see
A sweet uneasy pet.
A little creamy poodle
As I turned to face the vet.

Without a thought, I whispered
I will take him home
He looked at me and whimpered
His eyes were full of gloom

She said his leg was broken
Sent me home with meds
Consulted with my surgeon
to see if they could help.

Diane sent an email
To say Latke had passed
Latke was her treasure
And knows she can't replace

Another dog like Latke
I fear I do not have
But if you think you're ready
A foster, I do have

I said his name is Joshua
She said that just won't do
A new name to be proud of Something great and new.

So she named him Mozart
He is a work of art
She fell in love with Mozart
t'was matched from the start

I would not release him
Because I was not sure
The leg still was still not working right
The surgery did not cure

We made one more appointment
The surgeon was a gem
All of this was possible
Because of S-B-P-R-N

HAPPY TAIL
Ivy's Journey
by Romaine Trudo

This sweet seven-month-old Black Mouth Cur puppy was discovered on September 11, 2025, running loose along SaddleBrooke Boulevard near the entrance to the Preserve. She had a severely injured tail, no collar, no tags, and no microchip. SaddleBrooke Pet Rescue searched diligently for her owners, but no one came forward—leading us to suspect she had been intentionally abandoned.

Despite her injury, she radiated energy, joy, and excitement. She was placed in the loving foster care of Mary and Randall Zimmerman, who named her Sybil and showered her with kindness. For a month, veterinarians tried to heal her tail, but ultimately recommended amputation. The surgery was performed at the same time she was spayed, ensuring she could move forward pain-free.

By late September, a family adopted her, but sadly returned her a month later. Her exuberance, though endearing, proved overwhelming and posed a risk of injury to one of the adopters. Once again, she found herself in foster care—until her miracle arrived.

A SaddleBrooke couple, Sharon and Bryan Kanz, were searching for a playmate for their dog Honey Bee, a sweet and playful pup of similar breed. The moment they met Sybil, it was clear: this was a match made in heaven. On November 17, 2025, they adopted her, renamed her Ivy, and enrolled her in regular training sessions to help channel her boundless puppy energy. Today, Ivy and Honey Bee are inseparable best friends. They share a spacious yard to romp in and even a pool to splash around during hot summer days. Ivy's journey—from abandonment and injury to love and belonging—reminds us of the power of compassion and second chances. SaddleBrooke Pet Rescue Network and Ivy herself thank everyone who played a role in rescuing her, keeping her safe, and giving her the happy ending she so richly deserved.

YOUR SUPPORT IS MUCH APPRECIATED

Romayne Trudo

SaddleBrooke Pet Rescue Network would like to extend our heartfelt thanks to each and every one of you for your continued support. This year's Jim Click Millions for Tucson Raffle was a tremendous success. Thanks to the dedication of our SBPRN volunteers and the generosity of our community, ticket sales brought in $3,500.00

These funds will be immediately distributed to the rescue groups and shelters we support, helping to pay down veterinary bills and purchase much-needed equipment and food for homeless cats and dogs in our area.

Several Board members attended the December 11th drawing at Reid Park Zoo. While no one in SaddleBrooke took home the Kia Carnival, the first-class airline tickets, or the $5,000 cash prize, the true winners are the animals who will now be warm, well cared for, and well fed this winter.

We are excited to share that we will once again participate in the 2026 Jim Click Millions for Tucson Raffle. We hope you will consider supporting us again—giving you another chance to dream about which incredible prize you might win, while helping animals in need.

Thank you for making a difference.
